Part I

Ballet of Self-Doubt

Once upon a time, there was a Pianist who wanted to play a piece. She was joined by a Composer, and they decided to make a piece for her body.

The two started working with repetition, retrospection, re-examination, regression, progression, mistakes, frustration, and most importantly, play.

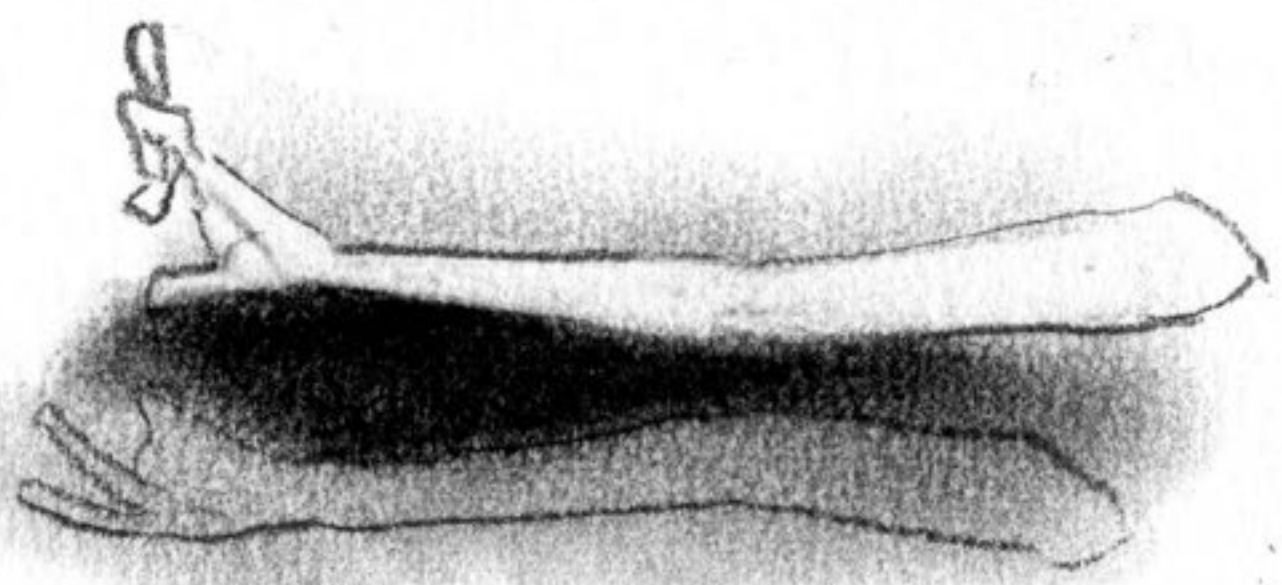

They began with stillness, unwrapping the assumptions and restrictions of the past, and slowly starting to explore the way their bodies transformed.

Part II

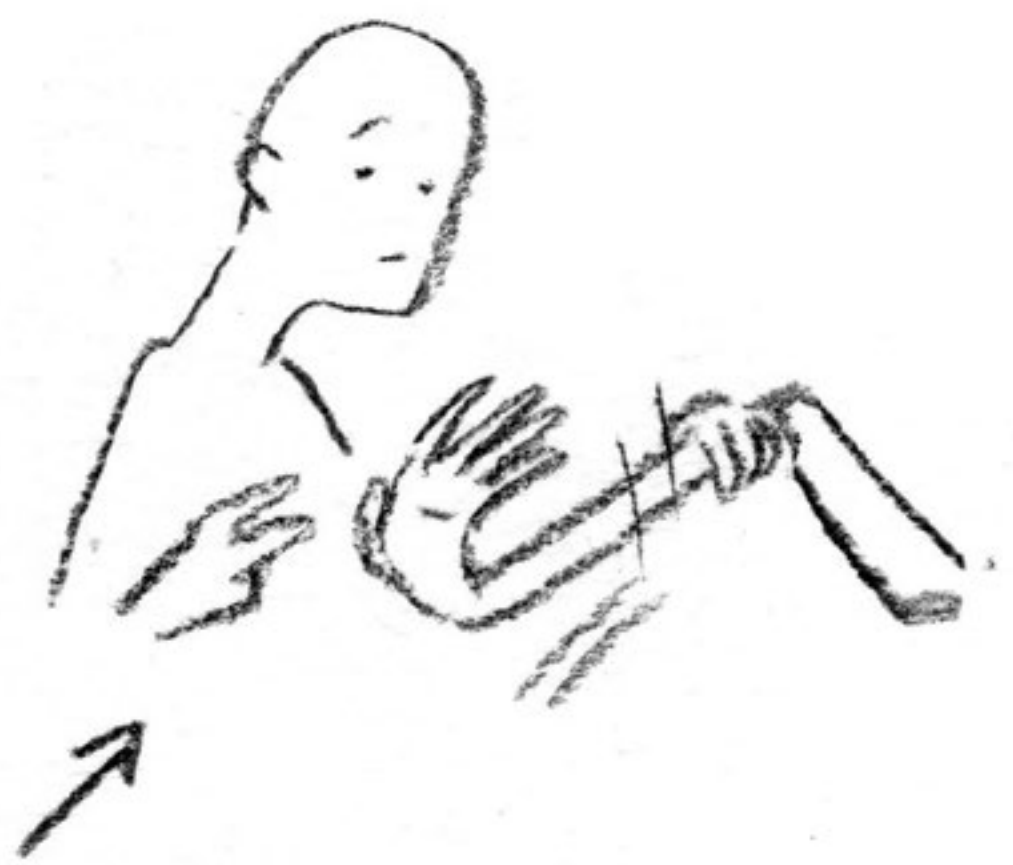

Ballet of Images

The Pianist and Composer were joined by an Artist, and together they developed these ideas,
talking, sharing, making and
remaking.

They shared these images with an Ensemble, inviting them to respond to them, copy them,
make them their own, and most importantly to communicate
their ideas.

They walked around,
exploring the space,
producing, reproducing,
sharing, moving...
but suddenly they were
interrupted by a piano!

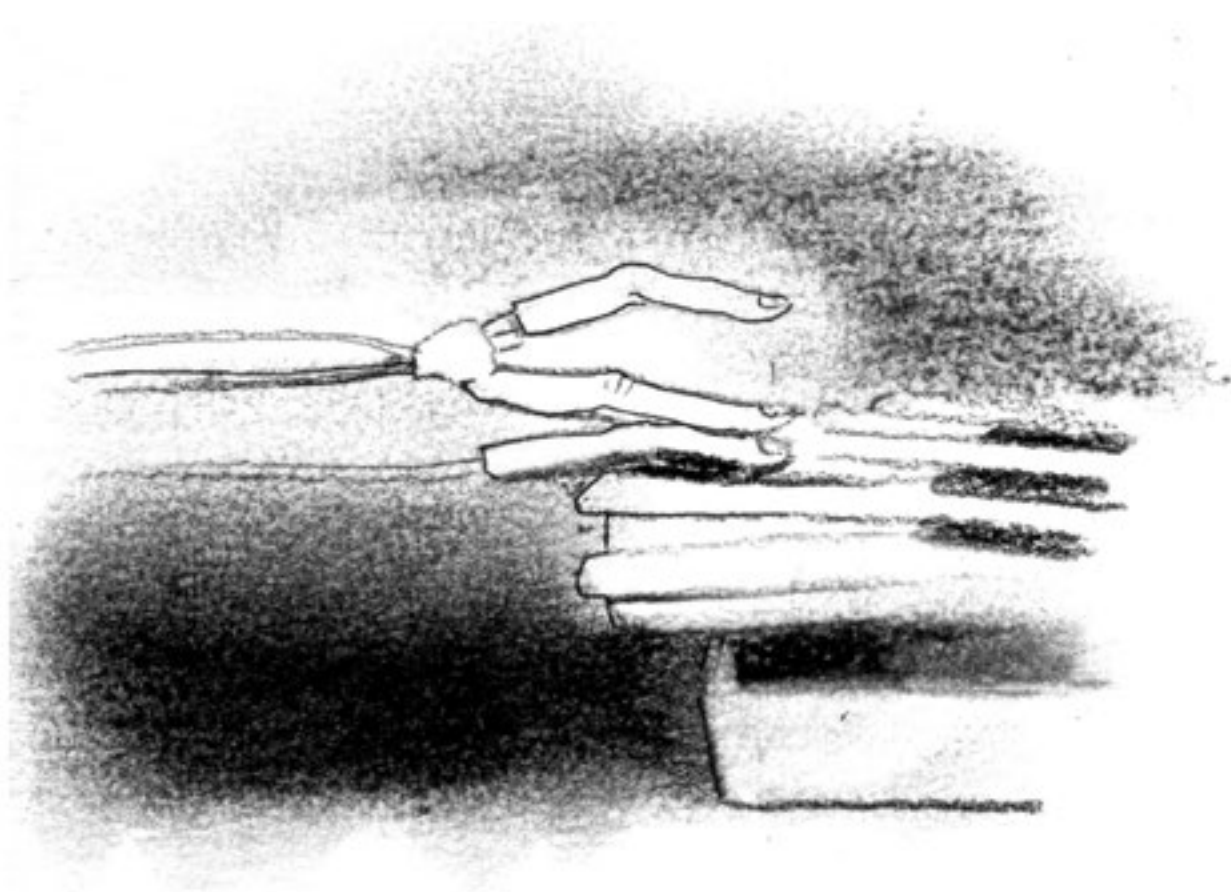

Part III

Ballet of Repetition and Body Etude

The Pianist was ready to perform. Sometimes the piece compelled her, guiding her actions. Sometimes there was room for spontaneity, and freedom for creation in the moment.

The Ensemble joined in, responding to the Pianist, developing their own compulsions and spontaneity, repeating, repeating, repeating...

Finally, the Pianist returned to stillness, and a new kind of tension. This wasn't a restricting outside tension, but one that emerged from her body. This was a piece for her body.
